

The Keck Institute for Space Studies
presents a Symposium on

California as Seen from Space Delivering Actionable Science

September 14, 2009

California Institute of Technology
Pasadena, California

Please join us for this unique opportunity to explore the use of space-based observations for managing California's precious resources, protecting the state's fragile environment, and supporting its emergency response and preparedness.

Drawing on a wide range of contributions from key policy-makers, industry leaders, and top scientists, this symposium promises to be a significant force for determining how California will meet its challenges in these important areas.

JPL

Please register on our website early:
registration is free but seating is limited,
and a box lunch is included.

www.kiss.caltech.edu

